HYDROPHOBIA.

The great difficulty among physicians, heretofore, in treating hydrophobia, has been the inability to locate the "disease" in any particular part of the body. There has been no root at which they could strike.

The knotty problem has been whether a diseased part peculiar to hydrophobia exists. At the post-mortem examination of Wm. McCormick, whose horrible death is fresh in the minds of the public, Dr. Wm. A. Hammond determined to examine under a microscope certain parts of the body, with a view to solving the problem. He took the medulla oblongata, dissected it, and placed it in alcohol. The great point he was to endeavor to ascertain was whether any structural changes not yet discovered would reveal a true lesion—that is, a diseased part peculiar to hydrophobia. It has been repeatedly asserted that there is no such lesion. On Monday, Dr. Hammond began his investigation.

THE MEDULLA OBLONGATA.

which had been dissected and preserved in alcohol, was taken out, and found in excellent condition. The first section was made through the spinal accessory nerve, where the filaments pass from the medulla. The reason that this part was first brought under observation was because the greater force of the disease seemed to be extended to the muscles of the throat. This was brought on by McCormick's attempting to drink a glass of water on Wednesday night. The attending physicians, at the post-mortem examination, were astonished at the healthy appearance of the larynx and pharynx internally, while the congestion and external inflammation amounted almost to engorgement. When this section had been properly adjusted, the cause of this condition of the throat was evident. At different points in the white and gray matter, which makes up the body of the medulla oblongata, could be distinctly seen, when highly magnified, black spots of irregular shape and various sizes, indicative of extravasated blood. At the origin of this appearance became more marked, and the evidence that the part was the seat of the disease was as positive as the thing could be. Other sections were made, and the same appearances were plainly to be observed.

The finding of structural changes in the medulla oblongata shows that the disease called hydrophobia is a true nervous disease, and not a blood poison. Dr. Hammond has found the key to the workings of the mysterious disease in McCormick's case. He was bitten upon the right knuckle of his right hand some time about eight or nine weeks ago. He washed it with brandy, but the virus had already reached the medulla and had begun its insidious work. Dr. Hammond traced the poison from the point of ingress into the system to the seat of incubation—the medulla oblongata. There the diseased action settled about the great nerves that control the action, and also extended to the hemispheres of the brain. This was shown by the peculiar attention that McCormick began to pay to the subject. The poison that was working in the

and Dr. Hammond began to influence his thoughts and even his dreams. As he then almost always do in brain affections, he strove to conceal the anxiety which was depicted in his face. When his friends and family asked him what was the matter, and advised him to see a physician, he laughed and then said: "That dog is not mad." From this incident date until the aggravation of the disease about the origin of the spinal accessory nerves and the pneumogastric nerves caused the terrible spasms that only ended in death, the progress of the disease is now marked and followed by Dr. Hammond.

Further experiments are to be made which will throw still more light upon the disease. Dr. Hammond has proved that in the case of McCormick a true lesion existed. If this is true of this case, it follows Dr. Hammond believes that it might have been equally true in others, but had been overlooked or deemed of the observations of the investigator not having been so advanced as these have been in this case.

THE COMET.

The following extract will give some information in relation to the comet now visible in the North-western sky, and becoming each night more conspicuous. After all, this comet is only rated in the "fourth class," and therefore not at all likely to be an object of terror, or in any way rivaling the splendors of those of 1858 and 1861.

REMARKS.

On July 16th, the tail will extend far beyond the pole and develop a new characteristic, tapering off rapidly toward the end. Within three or four days after the 16th, the tail will have become expanded in the neighborhood of the pole as to fill a large part of the northern heavens. Yet it will not be a conspicuous object, because it will be so faint as to look rather like an immense cloud, or a new milky-way, than what it really is. By this time we shall have solved this question whether the tail is hollow, or has a radiated structure, or what is its constitution.

Of the way in which this will end, it is not safe yet to speak with definiteness; for although if the tail were straight, we should be able certainly near the middle of it on July 20th, yet its curvature will probably delay it two or three days, and even until the earth has passed beyond its path. Taking the best value I can from the records of the previous comets, I should expect the earth on July 22d to be wholly within the eastern edge of the comet's tail; and I will assume this to be the case. The comet will then disappear to us; but then the inhabitants of the southern hemisphere, who may be ignorant of the cause of the luminosity of the evening sky, will see it gradually rise and pass away, and will be amazed by the sudden apparition of a comet of extraordinary size and fiscal brilliancy, which will burst upon their vision, as unforeseen as the great comet of 1861. The gradual diminution and final disappearance of the comet will be so nearly the converse of what we shall have witnessed here that it needs no description.

What will be the effect on the earth? I dare not predict the effect on the minds of men, especially of the ignorant; but I do not anticipate any appreciable physical effect on the earth? I dare not predict the effect on the minds of men, especially of the ignorant; but I do not anticipate any appreciable physical effect further than possible electrical phenomena like the aurora.

It will, of course, leave us a portion of its atmosphere when it departs, but probably not enough to affect the barometer, or to come within the cognizance even of scientists. But there may be, by possibility, the permanent effect of scientific interest and curiosity. If the earth should not entirely escape, the moon will also probably be involved, and it will also retain a portion of the cometary substance. As the amount of atmosphere upon the moon's surface is now so small, if indeed there is any at all, that it is recognizable by the most astronomical scrutiny, perhaps after the passage of the comet we shall find that henceforth the moon will have an atmosphere of greater or less density, which will materially modify the phenomenon of eclipses and solar eclipses. I will add that Venus is safely out of the way, so that the transit expedition will not be interfered with by the great comet of 1874.

A BRAVE BOY.—The Stillwater correspondent of the Troy Times of Wednesday writes:

"Let the papers of the day pass around the house of Lewis Simodell. The boy hero of thirteen years of age. One week ago the Times published an account of the lad's rescue of his sister, from drowning at the hazard of his own life. To-day it is our turn to chronicle a still greater feat, performed by this young champion of valor and noble deed. On Saturday afternoon two of the boy's little sisters, aged four and six years, rolled down the bank into the river into about five feet of water, and but a few rods above the average of the dreaded Stillwater rapid. The band of a few days ago was engaged at the opportune moment in a shop which projects out over the swift-rushing waters, and hearing that he heard a peculiar noise emanate from that quarter, he stepped to the door and saw his two little sisters struggling and struggling, and being hurriedly towards their doom. He was quickly aware that if the children were to be saved his arm must do it. He was standing on a platform twenty feet above the surface of the water, but he took the leap, went under, and soon appeared directly between the children. Then commenced a struggle for life. His cries for help were unheard, and the water was as deep as the boy's head. No one could give a better account of the termination of the affair than to use the lad's own words to the writer, which were: "I do not know how I did manage. There was almost gone when I reached them, and this time I had no help, but I had to get them above, and I did just in time."

DEATH OF GOV. CALDWELL.

TOD ROBERTSON CALDWELL, Chief Executive Officer of the State of North Carolina, died at the residence of Col. Thomas Ruffin in this place on Saturday afternoon at a quarter before six o'clock.

Gov. Caldwell reached here on Wednesday evening to attend the annual meeting of the Stockholders of the North Carolina Rail Road Company on Thursday. He was present at the morning session but took no part in the deliberations of the meeting, though apparently well. But in the afternoon, he was so unwell, that he did not leave the house, and the next morning was so seriously sick as to make the advice of a physician necessary. Dr. Strudwick was called, and at once recognized the gravity of the case, and urged that Dr. M. Burke Haywood of Raleigh who had attended the Governor in similar attacks be sent for. This however was not determined on until night, when about 10 o'clock, a gentleman rode down to Durham, and telegraphed from there. Dr. Haywood reached here about 10 on Saturday morning, but it was at once apparent that the case was beyond medical skill. Everything that science and experience could suggest was resorted to.

The disease which proved fatal was connected with the kidneys, which failed to perform their functions, throwing the uric acid into the circulation, and thereby poisoning the blood. Stupor soon became a marked feature in the case, from which however, the patient was easily aroused when necessary, and he exhibited to the last clearness of mind, and full possession of his faculties, but with no disposition to refer to his affairs, past, present or future.

Mrs. Caldwell was sent for, a special train having been dispatched by Major Smith, which reached here on its return with Mrs. C. an hour after the fatal issue.

His remains were taken to Raleigh, where they lay in state in the Capitol for one day, and were then transferred to Morganton for interment. A large delegation from Raleigh came up on Sunday afternoon, to accompany the remains, and a delegation of gentlemen appointed at a meeting of the citizens of Hillsboro joined that from Raleigh in paying the last tribute of respect to the dead.

The body was attended to the depot by a very large concourse of citizens, and the fitting tribute of respect paid to the remains of the chief executive of the State, without reference to party or to color.

The character and the services of Governor Caldwell are before the State, and we have nothing here to say of them. His record is well up. In the great all-British party passion stands abundant. We pass over all those claims of difference which politically separated us so widely, and only remember that in Tod H. Caldwell's large portion of his fellow citizens found in his qualities and talents entitled him to the highest honors in their gift.

Gov. Caldwell was 59 years old on his 15th birthday in February.

It is rumored that Vice-President Wilson is about to resign.

THE RAIL ROAD MEETING.

Outside of the ordinary routine business of an annual meeting, which, in this instance, after the reading of the reports, was devoted mainly to the election of W. A. Smith as one of the private directors, there was nothing of interest brought up for consideration, except the resolutions of W. R. Myers providing for the acceptance of the Amended Charter of the Company passed at the last session of the Legislature. If a bomb shell had fallen in the floor it could not have taken those not in the secret more by surprise. It was a coup-de-main, by which consolidation, so far as the action of the Company was concerned, was to be accomplished; and it was subject with which the private stockholders present were not prepared to deal at this time. For, independent of the fact that the acceptance of the Charter had been made by legislative enactment the subject of a special call of the company to consider it, after due notice, and publication at proper times and places, neither of which in this case had been given, it was well known that the results of the Salisbury meeting, the defects of which this resolutions was intended to supply, were the subject of anjuncture in the courts.

The resolutions were therefore resisted with energy and ability by H. C. Cameron, Thomas Webb, J. B. Hatchelor, W. A. Graham and Frank Caldwell.

In the range of discussion extending over several hours, it would be impossible to give a satisfactory synopsis of the discussion in our limits. It must suffice to say, that with a very few exceptions, as indicated by the final vote on the resolutions, a most decided hostility to the scheme of consolidation was developed among the private stockholders, and an equally strong tendency in its favor on the part of the State and Directors. The resolutions were finally decided by a stock vote. Upon the tender of the vote of the State proxy, G. M. Welker, his right to vote was contested by Hon. W. A. Graham on the ground, that the State having already exercised its voice in the decision of this question as entered through the Legislature, had no right to come again, and exercise its power a second time, when the right of decision ought to be left to the private stockholders, upon a principle sustained in a case where the Bank of the State was a party, and when the vote of the State proxy was excluded on this ground. Mr. Welker waived his right to vote, but upon the suggestion of L. A. Humphrey, that as a majority of the whole vote was necessary to a decision, and the vote of the State essential to show a majority of the whole vote present, he claimed his right to vote. This was allowed by the President of the meeting with the understanding that those objecting to Mr. Welker voting have the right to record their protest, which was so ordered.

The vote was then announced, and the resolutions were declared adopted, and consolidation declared the purpose and policy of the company.

It is very certain that the Stockholders here, and generally everywhere are opposed to the scheme. It seems to them to mean nothing less than the sacrifice of all their hard-earned investments, their total absorption into the great body of a mammoth corporation, where individuality will be lost, and where individual interests will be ignored. But the simple fact that we know to be honest, patriotic and sagacious, urge it as a means of state salvation, and as conducive to the interests of those same stockholders, would be a sufficient reason to defer us from branding the scheme, as has been done, as one conceived in fraud, and carried through with the deepest boldness of practiced iniquity.

But it has many a severe ordeal to pass through before it is a fait accompli, and those who are adverse to it may yet triumph in the discountenance of its advocates.

INDEPENDENT CANDIDATES.

Read the following bit of advice from the Wilmington Journal:

"These so-called independent candidates do not appear from the nominating convention to their own party, but they appeal to a tribunal composed of the enemy and a handful of their own party. Independent candidates are always thus led, by the enemy. It is plain then that no man can rightfully claim to be a true member of a party who denies the duly expressed will of that party. It is too plain that all independent candidates and their supporters where a party has put forward regular candidates can be regarded only as disorganizers—in a word as enemies. The man who puts himself in opposition to the regular nominees cannot be regarded as a true conservative."

The notice of the death of Gov. Caldwell, and that of the Rail Road meeting excludes much matter which would otherwise have been appropriate to the times.

For a few days you can get a good likeness of yourself or friends. This opportunity will soon be gone, then don't delay but call at once and secure one at the gallery of Stone and Dodson.

MR. BASON COMES OUT!

Another gentleman yields to the seductive music of popular applause, and unostentatiously gives up his dreams of a happy conclusion at the call of "many citizens of both political parties." Mr. George Basen announces himself as a candidate for the office of Solicitor in the Seventh Judicial District.

Mr. Basen, like the Ruffin, has suddenly become sensitive to the dangers to result from the election of violent and bitter partisans. How comes it that all this reverence for law, and this anxiety for rigid impartiality in the administration of justice has so suddenly been awakened in a party, the opposite principles and practice of which for years have been its reproach, and from the evil and odium of which the people of the District have now set about in earnest to relieve themselves? For we naturally and inevitably include Mr. Basen in this party. He is carrying out its purposes and trying to accomplish its ends in the defeat of the very ticket Mr. Basen himself was instrumental a short time since in putting on the field.

As a conservative, he stands convicted by his own act. He admits by his candidacy an opposition to the expressed will of his party. Independence is too flimsy a barrier between conservatism and radicalism.

It deceives no body, for every body knows what it means, and as for the hope or promise of securing a fairer and more impartial administration of the law, that amounts to nothing. A lawyer known to the District might hold out some new hopes, if such were needed. As it is, Mr. Basen's candidacy will only serve the purpose of advertising free, through the district, a lawyer of whom no one cut of his county had any previous knowledge. If so, Mr. Basen is welcome to the benefits of the ruse. But if he is really in earnest in advertising for Conservative votes, he has sadly misused it. They will not come, and Mr. Basen like Col. Ruffin will have only the equivocal compliment of radical support.

THE CIVIL RIGHTS BILL.

This is one of those things which is not dead, but sleepeth, and therefore it is well to be constantly alive to its dangers, and to be forewarned against the deplorable consequences of its final enactment.

We allude to it this week to expose some of the diabolical machinery of the bill, to show how expensively it works, and how thorough the provisions for its enforcement. It seems to have been discussed in only one of its aspects—that of its relation to the colored race, and its effect upon public schools. But the range of operations is a wider one, and the enforcement of the penalties for disregard to the law are provided for with such ingenious malice and prompt application, that there is no evasion or escape. An enumeration of the rights to be secured is not necessary here. But look at the penalties for resistance. "Any person who shall violate Sec. 1, by denying to any person entitled to its benefits &c., shall for every such offense, forfeit and pay the sum of five hundred dollars to the person aggrieved thereby, to be recovered in action on the case, with full costs, and shall also, for every such offense be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, be fined not less than one thousand dollars, or shall be imprisoned not more than one year.

There never was a law which is so well calculated and so deliberately designed to breed strife and disorder, or which is so tyrannical in its effects. The innocent, the quiet, the unobtrusive, are put absolutely in the power of the vicious and turbulent. Moreover a direct premium is offered to point by the inducement held out by this law. All violations of it are to be tried before United States Commissioners, plaintiff tools whose interests are all with the government that makes the law. Their decisions may be presumed, and the imposition of the fine or penalty prompt and without appeal.

It is easy to see, by the ease with which five hundred dollars may be made, how many there are, when no rights are infringed, to force themselves into positions where they may encounter resistance—a resistance sought for and desired—whereby they may be invaded, school houses infested, hotels intruded upon, public conveyances polluted, annoyances or outrages committed by the vilest of the human race, to receive the reward of violence so liberally tendered by a radical government.

There is one little grain of comfort to be found if the bill should pass. Its operations are not exclusively for the benefit of the negro. The northern people will find out before they get through with it, that the thousands of roughs and gamblers, of thieves and bores, are as thoroughly protected by this law as the negro.

The palatial hotels, the gorgeous theaters, the luxurious steamers, of the exclusive Pullman Cars, from all of which the colored are now so rightly excluded, will be invaded by this host of wretches, who will demand their rights, or their five hundred dollar penalty. It is money made without work, and strictly in accordance with the law.

It will be a fine illustration of the Englishman's motto, "let the law be the law." But we do not want the law, even to secure the satisfaction of such a recoil on its framers. Therefore, let no man receive a white vote in this district who supports a party which brings forward so insulting, so iniquitous and so oppressive a measure.

A CARD.

To the Electors of the Seventh Judicial District of North Carolina:

I RESPECTFULLY announce that I am a candidate for the office of Judge at this coming election.

I have been determined to take this step, by the advice of many persons, friends and the solicitations of persons, belonging to the several political parties in the District, who perceive themselves desirous of having the law administered without reference to party.

Being incapable of soliciting votes for such an office, upon the score of party prejudice, I should make no attempt, at all in that subject, but I had not been charged in some of the Public Prints (in advance of any publicly expressed purpose of mine to become a candidate), that I had named my party affiliation, in the hope of reward from those, to whom as it is well known, I have hitherto been opposed.

Such a charge is alike unjust to me, and to those who make it, and I here give it my most positive denial: There never has been a day, and there can never come a day in my life when I have been, or can be, willing to separate my fortunes from those of this good people of my native State, with whom I have so long and so warmly sympathized.

In conclusion, I beg to assure the whole people of this District, that in the event of my proposition to be honorable and important an office, I will use my best efforts to discharge its duties faithfully, by an equal, just and impartial administration of the Law.
